Seclusion on this scale necessitates the creation of visual barrier that separates a larger open space from a smaller area. Seclusion connotes a certain privacy. Garden owners often desire others to see and perhaps envy their seclusion. Prunus caroliniana, Carolina Cherry Laurel defines the private area, while allowing on-lookers to glimpse just a hint of those within the confines of the grove. Trees are approximately 20 feet tall with a similar spread at maturity. Dark green evergreen leaves are complemented by dark gray bark.
